The Spy's Adventures in South America

A Travel Adventure for the Entire Family

The Spy's Adventures in South America takes you on a continental search for the fiendish Dr. X, who may be hiding anywhere from Belize to the Antarctic. Travel South America and beyond in search of informants, who may give you clues to Dr. X's secret location if you give them something in return.

With one player, it's just you against Dr. X, trying to find informants so you can catch him as quickly as possible. With 2 to 6 players, you can play cooperatively (forming a spy network), where each player moves independently, but work together to find and solve clues, find informants, and ultimately find Dr. X. Or you can play competitively (spy against spy), where each searches for their own villain, but must compete to solve clues and race to get to the informants. The winner may be the one to find his or her villain first . . . or it may be the one to earn the most efficiency points . . .

Travel to any adjacent region shown on the map screen in the game, and search locations in each region. A computer dossier is available for each region, and the computer keeps track of all your clues. Some clues tell where you might find a hidden jewel, and jewels are handy to give to informants in exchange for information on Dr. X's whereabouts.

All information is stored on disk. Separate books are not required for play. All interaction with the computer is handled with just 3 keys on the computer (such as SPACE BAR to move between choices, and RETURN to select a choice), or, in some versions, by selecting choices with a mouse. You don't have to type in complex instructions or remember a lot of keyboard commands.

Each time played, you start with new clues and a new location for Dr. X. Besides "finding Dr. X" to win, points are awarded for efficiency . . . how many clues you solve, how quickly you find Dr. X, and how much money you are able to save the agency by not spending it and by returning the jewels. Games may be saved in progress so that you can continue at any time.

Travel and search the continent and beyond from Panama to Rio de Janeiro, the Bahamas to Peru, Venezuela to Argentina. If you happen to learn something in the process, all the better: it'll make you a better spy!

Adventures in South America was designed by Mark Pelczarski. Illustrations are by Brian Poff and Elizabeth L. Redlich. Programming by Jeffrey Jay. Graphics were created with The Graphics Magician. Penguins feel at home in South America.

Note: Adventures in South America includes some Central American and Caribbean countries that are actually part of North America.

Also available are Adventures in North America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and the Pacific Islands.
